

“You’ll see a lot more people looking to participate because of some of the pricing stability,” said Clay Richards, CEO of naviHealth. “They kept a lot of the parts that are working in the current program, and they tried to listen to people like us about some of the changes that we and our provider partners have been asking for.”

Richards expected significantly more providers to sign up for the new model compared with the existing BPCI program, in which 450 have taken part.

Read the full article here.