

COVID-19 has swept through many nursing facilities across the country with deadly efficiency. Others remain untouched, however, and in some cases, facilities are beginning to discharge former COVID-19 patients back into the community. No matter where a facility may be along the COVID-19 trajectory, leaders are facing difficult decisions when beginning to “cohort.”

Skilled Nursing News spoke with Colleen O’Rourke, naviHealth’s Senior Vice President of Clinical and Network Solutions, about the detailed strategies for proper cohorting of post-acute and long-term care facilities. Read the full story here.
