

Health care's rapid changes and growing complexity necessitate that all care providers collaborate and maximize their efficiency as never before, and few health care professionals understand that better than nurses. As their leaders on the front lines of patient care, system chief nurse executives and hospital chief nursing officers bring a unique — and increasingly valuable — perspective from which to champion these efforts, from the bedside to the top of the leadership ladder.

Read the full article here.